Introduction

Product labelling is an important tool to ensure better information and greater protection for the consumer.

Labelling informs and safeguards the consumer and protects the leather goods sector. Unified labels are a mutual benefit both for consumers and the leather industry, as they indicate the exact nature of the materials and components used.

The labelling of a product is only possible when the type of material used, and the product and the parts to which the label refers, are clearly defined. This document has been designed as a reference document for the labelling of the leather goods sector.
